Conditions and Terms of Sale to the Trade

HOME

BANDALASTA is the registered trade mark of Brookes & Adams Ltd., and articles bearing this mark must only be re-sold to the public at prices stated in our current Price List. If these terms are not agreed and carried out, we reserve the right to stop supplies, and we shall not in any way be under any liability to the buyers.

TRADE DISCOUNTS

BANDALASTA is subject to a trade discount of 33 $\frac{1}{3}$ %, and on approved accounts, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ % discount for monthly settlement, or 3 $\frac{1}{4}$ % for cash strictly 7 days from invoice date, otherwise strictly nett. Postage will be charged on all parcels, but goods sent by rail are carriage paid.

PACKING CASES AND PACKING

These are charged, and may be returned carriage paid to us for full credit, but if desired may be retained at half price.

NOTE

This Ware is NOT sold by us as UNBREAKABLE, and we cannot hold ourselves responsible for damage or breakage. Goods should be carefully examined immediately on receipt. Claims for breakages in transit must be made at once to the Parcels & General Assurance Association Co., Ltd., 38, Waterloo Street, Birmingham, as per slip, if Parcel Post enclosed, or if per Rail, with invoice. Any claims for shortage or defect must be made within 7 DAYS or cannot be considered.

EXPORT

BANDALASTA must not be exported without our permission in writing. This does not refer to retail sales to customers abroad. Export cases are charged at cost and are not returnable.

Bandalasta

is not china — not glass. What is it?

ONE OF THE FIRST questions one asks is "What is BANDALASTA?" Is it celluloid or is it made from milk? The answer to both these questions is No! Then what is it? To explain to the non-technical mind is rather difficult, but, broadly speaking, it is made from Synthetic Resin. Not the resin one usually knows and uses for the violin bow, but a resin synthetically produced in the laboratory, a product of modern chemistry, made under British Patents and from British materials discovered and developed by British Chemists.

Formaldehyde is combined with other chemical products to produce this resin, which is perfectly colourless, and not brown as in the case of the ordinary resin which is the gum of the tree.

This synthetic resin is ground up with a suitable "filler," and a dye to produce the required colour is added. The result is a fine powder having the appearance in the lighter shades of flour. The requisite quantity of this powder is taken, the various colours being carefully weighed and blended by skilled workmen, the quantity being sufficient to fill the mould producing the shape required. The article is then moulded or shaped under a pressure of 2 tons to the square inch, in hardened and beautifully polished steel dies, hydraulic machinery giving pressures up to some hundreds of tons being used. Heat is applied during the process which causes the resin to soften and flow. The heat and pressure is maintained for several minutes, when a chemical change takes place, the resin hardens, and the article takes the shape of the mould. At the end of this time the resulting piece of BANDALASTA is removed from the mould and allowed to cool, and it cannot be again softened by subsequent heating.

The edges are then trimmed and the surface polished by special machinery and the result is the beautiful BANDALASTA article, which cannot be successfully imitated by any other process.

NOTE

Articles made from this special material and by this process are known by the general trade name of "Beal" — not china — not glass — not crock — not porcelain, but "Beal." In the same way that there are different kinds of china, etc., so there are different kinds of "Beal," but it is sufficient to glance through the pages of this book or to examine the range of BANDALASTA patterns to assure oneself that in buying BANDALASTA you are buying "Beal" at its best. BANDALASTA is the original make of this class of ware and can show an almost unlimited range of patterns, second to none in artistic merit or for general utility purposes.

Refuse all substitutes, a successful product has many imitators — always say BANDALASTA and see our Trade Mark on the bottom of every piece.

This, then, is a brief description of the production of BANDALASTA, and now one asks "What are the uses and advantages of the articles produced by this wonderful process?"
